TO MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF 1967:

A great deal of unwarranted criticism is being directed toward the youth of today. The statements are grossly unfair because they are directed or leveled at all our young people when they apply to only a very small percentage of them. This troublesome group was with us years ago; we will always have with us this small percentage that causes difficulties and unrest, not only in our youth group but in our adult population.

It is unfortunate that these critics are not in a position to observe some of the great accomplishments of the youth of today. They would marvel at the ability and talent shown by our young people in musical productions, such as the Regional and State Music Educators' Concerts, and the work which they produce for art exhibits. Their knowledge of scientific phenomena and demonstrations of scientific principles would surprise them at a science fair. Their poise and skill of presentation, debating or in a drama, would prove most enjoyable and enlightening. Their knowledge of mathematical principles in a course on computers would leave them very confused. The scholastic and athletic records of the students of today compare most favorably with those of the past. It is most unfair to condemn the great majority of the youth of today for the undesirable acts and unrest caused by a small minority.

The class of 1967 is a part of this very fine group of young people of the present day. Its achievements are many and varied and the quality of these achievements may rightly be a source of pride to the class members, their parents and their teachers.

We sincerely wish you, the class of 1967, every success in the work that you undertake and happiness throughout your life.

Sincerely,

Ralph J. Martin

Fellow Members of the Class of 1967:

The past four years have flown by quickly for us, and it is now that we fully realize the responsibilities and burdens that are ahead of us. Adults tell us it's a "cold, cruel world," but I am sure that each of us is fully capable of meeting it. Our last four years have been designed to make us able men and women, ready to challenge and explore all facets of our new and growing world. Whatever occupation we may choose, be it doctor, lawyer, athlete, engineer, or soldier, I'm sure that we all can be successful if we try.

Since we are the first class to graduate after four years at Framingham South High School, we must set a precedent for those who come after us to follow. Thanks to our fine school system and administration, we have been guided in how to meet the various challenges ahead of us. If we adhere to our principles and those things which have been instilled in us, we will do credit to our class and our school, as well as to our parents and ourselves.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my fellow classmates for allowing me to represent them as President of the Class of '67. I would especially like to thank our principal, Mr. Martin, and Mrs. Savas, our advisor, for the help and guidance they have given us in the past four years.

Sincerely,

Brian R. Hastings

"You don't look sick to me," says Mrs. Restighini as Ellis Bryant reports to Medical.

The Medical Department, to many students is simply a competent group consisting of a doctor and group of nurses in navy blue. The office where they are located is a haven when illness or accident strikes. Occasionally it has been used as a hoped-for escape-hatch for erring students. However, only rarely has this escape trick been successful, as nurses have a remarkable nose for such students.

Actually, an interested student would find that duties and responsibilities of the Medical Department are many and varied, and that the application of ice-packs and dispensing of band-aids is only a small part. Most important of these is the health counseling of pupils; next is the assisting of parents in any health problems of their children. On a broader scale, the effective Medical Department is a curriculum in health problems, the consultant on school building and grounds sanitation and safety, and finally a health resource and administrative assistant on health problems for the entire school community.

Maintenance

Mr. Mailman spurs on an excited student body at the North rally.

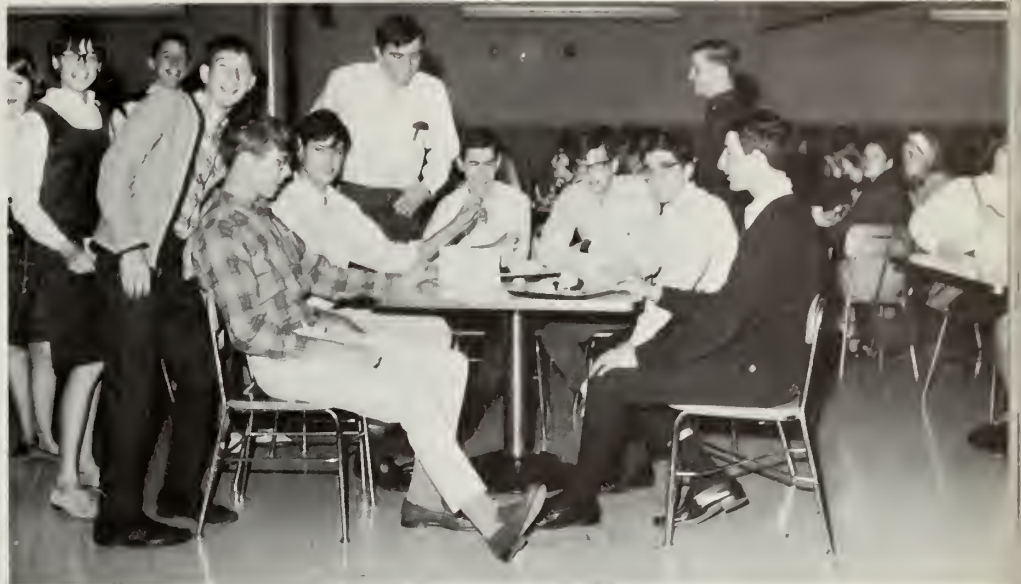

STAFF: Front Row: Patrick Daly, Gino Bonvini, John Woodrum; Second Row: Joseph Cinimo, Everett Mailman, Head Custodian; Chester Komola, and Mrs. Ida Ryan.

There is more to South High than meets the eye: behind the calm exterior, four thousand two hundred sixty lockers need to be kept in repair; fifteen hundred gallons of oil a day in three boilers heat students to seventy degrees Fahrenheit; twenty-two acres of grass grow to be mowed in the summer. Handling both the routines and crises of keeping South running, the Maintenance Department covers collectively several miles in halls a day. Arriving at 6:30 each morning, Mr. Everett Mailman directs his staff in taking care of everything from combination locks to mixers in the cafeteria, from routine repairs to preparation of the gym for a rally. When one boiler "kicks out," maintenance kicks it in again; otherwise learning might be a cold business at times.

Cafeteria

"It's still alive; kill it!"

We're all behind thirty cent lunches.

CAFETERIA STAFF: Mary Cordella, Edward Rowan, Marie Lawson, Nell Oldum, Joan Goddard, Laura Fio Rito, Eileen Svensson, Gladys Gibbs, Alzada Munyon, Florence Gay, Arlene Medeiros, Eleanor Bartolini, Charlotte Doherty, Ingrid Kirk, Kay Plourde, Mary Wamboldt, Marta Carlson, Rose Dufault, Alice Anderson, Helen Sawyer (Director).

The Lunch lines may be long, but understandably so, for in all the Framingham schools over seven thousand six hundred students are served a day. Program director Miss Helen Sawyer, with her staff, plans the meals to contain no less than one-third of daily nutrient requirements, with enough variety for interest. This year the price was raised from twenty-five to thirty cents when operation costs began to tax available funds. The noon program is supported in part by sales and in part by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It uses twelve thousand one-half pint cartons of milk daily; enough to keep more than eight and three-fourths cows busy for three and seven-eighths days.

Ouch!

Mr. Rowan

In Appreciation

SOPHIE SAVAS

We, the Class of 1967, wish to express our thanks to Mrs. Sophie Savas for her genuine interest in us as a teacher and as a friend. Her understanding guidance and her sincere concern for the future of our class have given us the opportunity to make a worthy contribution to our school and to society.

In Recognition

MARY McMANUS

To Miss Mary McManus, teacher of English at Framingham South High School for ten years, we extend our special recognition. Her forty years of service, teaching and guiding young people in three Massachusetts schools, were a rich contribution to education from which we are grateful to have benefited.

In Memoriam

J. EARL CLINTON

To the family, relatives, and friends of Mr. John Earl Clinton, we extend our deepest and most personal sympathy. A dedicated coach and teacher in the Framingham Public School System for thirty-two years, he contributed to many town government, civic, and sports organizations. His abrupt passing at the beginning of this year has sorrowed and bereaved us all.

Ten thousand books for Miss Lewis, English Department Head, to count and process in June. Is the world too much with us? No, there were two English classes in the stage's girls' dressing room, almost one in the math lab, and a drama class in the auditorium. A new creative writing course began producing authors, the Herald-Traveler Shakespeare repertoire brought Hamlet alive so he could

The ideal place to learn a language is in the land speaking it. However, because such an arrangement is impossible, the language department must be a workable substitute, even with a disadvantage of three thousand years or four thousand miles. Instruction of Latin, French, German, and Spanish is under the general direction of Mr. Leveille. Teachers conduct classes in the language being studied as much as possible. Classics, including Le Cid, Les Miserables, the Aeneid, and Le Tour de Monde exercise comprehension skill; and the language lab furthered conversational ability. After school four clubs operating under the department enriched verbs and nouns with cultural insight. The language corridor was never an Appian Way, or a Champs-Elysees, but it was the Latin Quarter for South.

Social Studies

Mr. Christopher Garrahan and his Social Studies Department all believe in History. But unlike the Communists, who revere this same ideal, they are concerned with interesting students in the people and places of human society. To this end, courses ranging from Ancient and Medieval History to Sociology, Russian Studies to Economics are offered. In addition to the text, extra books are often assigned, speakers invited, and panel discussions held. Several of Mr. Kelley's classes held mock trials to study legal procedure; and under the only high school experimental program in the area, Mr. Zaido's geography classes featured a new urban approach. The United Nations scholarship contest in the spring offered outstanding students a chance to exhibit their knowledge. Facts were given interest and application: Washington braved the Potomac again, William had to conquer England once more, and Doctor Zhivago became consulting physician of the Russian Studies class.

Weather-watching, dissecting of earthworms, producing strange chemical odors, and tinkering with light: these activities were all part of the science department. Dr. John Meegan coordinated the teaching of general science, earth science, biology, chemistry, and physics classes. Not only study, but laboratories, practical work, and, for biologists, tramps through nature were part of education.

... Tragedy also occurred; the skeleton in B-5 lost half a leg and an arm, many test tubes met their maker, and no physics student proved the Unified Field Theorem. At times the odor of sharks in biology laboratory threatened indigestion. But students learned principles, the scientific method, and, a lucky few, the Inverse Square Law. And what else is there to know?

In a far corridor there is a whirl: the minds of the math department in collective thought. No necessary mathematics was too simple, no calculus too difficult for department head Mr. Russell Antell and his associates to communicate. Pre-algebra prepared some for algebra which, along with geometry, explored the complexities of numbers; review courses refreshed memories, and advanced courses attacked the deepest analytical thought. Mr. DiVittorio offered an after school computer course using the electronic brains at Computer Control Company in Framingham. Mathematics, through new methods and even field trips, was never so much like rolling off a logarithm.

Happiness in the Business Department includes 72 manual typewriters, 36 electric typewriters, 5 kinds of 10-key printing calculators, rotary calculators, duplicators, copying machines—plus teachers that can tell them apart. The demand for typing skill has grown so fast that we have 300 students enrolled in typing classes, learning that asdf jkl; without looking is their immediate goal in life.

Audio-visual aids in abundance are constantly in action, from records to overhead projectors to EDL controlled readers, even to Mr. Hatch's screwdriver and bent coat hanger for repairs. New this year is the typing pool for school activities under Mrs. Peckham. "Business as usual" is plainly the order of the day.

With a curriculum covering clothing to chefs, the Home Economics Department has grown out of its quarters near the cafeteria. So a Child Growth and Development class expanded into the boys' dressing room. Whatever the location, the department, under the supervision of Mrs. Lillian Kreger, teaches courses in food and clothing, with programs ranging from interior design to fashion design. Practical work, guest speakers, and audio-visual aids supplemented academic study. Two hundred dozen eggs a year and two hundred pounds of flour at Christmas made food very real to cooking classes. There were the Betty Crocker Scholarship contest, and a Sterling Silver Award for the student with the best record of improvement. Student chefs visited a meat market, girls made Prom formals, and Mrs. Eldridge's class gave the annual faculty tea. For the lucky few, a soaking from a broken dish-washing hose completed Practical Experience.

In the art rooms student work is plainly visible on walls, doors, blackboards, and windows. Basics of art: paint, sculpture, carving, weaving, even advertising design are part of the curriculum directed by Mr. Neil Cotton. Each year, a stuffed owl and pheasant, used as models, become immortalized in hundreds of drawings; this year they were misplaced, briefly, to the grief of all involved. Inspiration came in Mr. Clancy's words, uttered over an incipient masterpiece: "It has possibilities." A few students returned for "post graduate" weaving courses; others trailed behind Mr. Forbes with supplies as he moved classes from the vocational art room to B-15. Through the year, various teachers helped with school events, including the senior play, and especially the Prom. In art, the student created—with paint, clay, paper, wood, and frequently, inspiration.

Music Department

Mr. Murray
Director of Music

Mr. Oneschuk

The Music Department means chorus courses, hours of rehearsals, and notes for the teacher; it is a football landing in a sousaphone at a football game; but most of all, it is Mr. Joseph Oneschuk. His talented musicians are heard at football games and athletic rallies, the Christmas assembly, music festival, senior play, Memorial Day Parade, National Honor Society Induction, awards assemblies, and graduation.

In the music theory courses, fundamentals and techniques of music history and composition are taught. The classes must prepare a complete band score, played and conducted by the students. This course has also resulted in the composition of an original school alma mater and 1967 Class Song. The music appreciation classes are experimenting with a "related arts" approach in which music is integrated with the development of history, literature, and art. In the department marks may be scaled to retain harmony between student and teachers.

The Industrial Arts Department offers a multi-faceted program which enables students to gain experience in the areas of mechanical drawing, woodwork, metalwork, the graphic arts, electricity, technical drawing, and data processing. Here students learn the techniques of building, photography, magnetism, communications, and electricity, later to be used in their work or hobbies. Computer programming and solid state electronics are growing fields the department explores: calculations at incredible speed and devices streamlined of vacuum tubes. Using techniques learned, students construct boats and assemble a working television. Modern (industrial) art.

Vocational

The roar of the engines, the hum of machines. This, and more, is Vocational. Designed for students planning to enter a trade directly after graduation, the school has grown under the direction of Mr. Joseph Keefe. Students alternate one week in shop and one week in class, specializing either in automotive shop, electronics, or machines. Future mechanics dissect "live" cars, literally getting inside the subject. Electronic shop covers the commercial devices, like television sets, and more complex computer and sonar mechanisms. Machinists learn the tools and methods of working materials for useful ends, as well as how to control a temper (metallic). In short, Vocational has the most grinding curriculum at South.

Stressing a well-balanced program, the South High School Physical Education Department is interested in the development of both team competition and individual contributions by students during class periods.

Although difficulty is occasionally experienced in keeping shut the doors separating the boys' and girls' gym classes, the physical fitness program presents successfully a variety of activities, including touch football, basketball, volleyball, soccer (and crab soccer) gymnastics and archery.

Conclusion: gym is a fit course for every curriculum.

Driver Education

Mr. Fraser

Mr. Hebard

Mr. Novak

In only one department is it possible to drive a car up a guy wire, or try to put oil in a radiator: driver education. Instructors Mr. Gregory Hebard, Mr. Thomas Fraser, and Mr. John Novak do not plan such abnormal occurrences, but in the course of classwork and on-the-road instruction, accidents will happen. The regular class curriculum covers automobile function, maintenance, and safety; Massachusetts highway law; various types of driving (winter, night, highway); and driver attitude. Students may analyze the cause of a particular accident and ways to avoid it. On the road, students first learn basic maneuvers, then plunge into traffic, and finally accelerate to over thirty miles per hour. In the winter, drivers skid in the parking lot to develop control. The department is one of the state's finest; taking care of over 250 students each year. Two cars, donated by local dealers, together travel over 20,000 miles a year for education. Driver education is the one class where a student cannot be run down by the homework.

Guidance

Mr. Frabotta, Department Head

Miss Connors

Mr. Lopes

Mr. Porter

Miss Queenan

Four years of college, a Master's Degree, two years' teaching. All this to become a counselor, and just talk to people? But the Guidance Department, directed by Mr. Bernard T. White, with Mr. John Frabotta in charge at South, is more than this. Each of the six counselors is assigned about 300 students on an alphabetical basis: programs are arranged, and conflicts that might confuse the computer resolved by hand. There are recommendations and transcripts for over half the seniors: over the years perhaps 500 universities have accepted South students. And five times a year innumerable College Board scores must be distributed. Dissemination of scholarship information and job placement are other concerns. Counselors make recommendations to students on the basis of available information, their methods including parent and teacher consultation, referrals, and most important, interviews with students. The fact that Mr. Porter, with the department's oldest car, handles Vocational's automotive students has absolutely no influence on his decisions. Whatever the case, as forms grow longer, and days shorter, guidance continues to point students in the right direction.

American Field Service Program

Haluk Ozemek and his American brother, Ellis Bryant.

First of all, I would like to thank the Philomath editors who were so nice to give me this opportunity to explain my experiences in the United States.

This year was very special and interesting for me. It was the first time that I tried to live such a long period of time in a very different country. Before I came, I thought it would be very difficult, but it wasn't, because the people here, especially my American parents, were very helpful and friendly to me. For the first couple of weeks at Framingham South High School, I was very confused, because it was quite different from my own high school in Turkey, especially the traveling between classrooms.

Sports were a little bit different, too. For example, I never saw football before I came to the United States. After my friends explained to me how to play, I really liked it. During the soccer season I enjoyed playing that sport very much, because it was my national sport.

There is one thing left that I would like to tell you about the American Field Service. It is really a great organization. I always think that if it were not for AFS, I never would have found the opportunity to learn the American way of life and meet so many good friends. I thank all of you for your part in this.

Haluk's family: Sister Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Cemal Ozemek, Haluk.

What's the Company like anyway? Would I be proud to work there? Reputation for square dealing with employees? Pleasant surroundings?

Will I be working with others my own age? Are they friendly? Do they socialize after hours?

Will the boss be reasonable? Appreciate good, hard work, but won't explode if I make a mistake?

Will I make a decent week's pay? Have a chance for raises, advancement, more responsibility? How about fringe benefits?

Is the work challenging? I had what it takes to get through high school. Will they give me a chance to use my brains?

Note: Many young men and women in this area can answer "Yes" to these questions. They work for New England Telephone.

Why not talk with our employment interviewer soon . . . before you graduate? Ask your Guidance Counselor to tell you when and where to apply.

50 Franklin Street Framingham, Mass.
Your Family Photographer

Congratulations to the Class of 1967

We know the sigh of relief that comes at the end of your final exam. Long years of study behind you, and a big wide world ahead.

But even at that it isn't the final test—or the end of your learning. The biggest tests still face you in the choice and fulfillment of your life's work.

Many plan for college, some must reckon with the armed forces. Others will seek positions in industry, trade, business. We, at Dennison, congratulate you on your past accomplishments; if your future plans call for steady employment or summer work, we'll be glad to discuss your problems with you.

Our Employment Department will welcome the chance to outline opportunities existing in our offices, factory, and warehouse.
